

Mrs. Farmer—"I s'pose all you fine city folks are 'way ahead of us who live in the country."

Anty Drudge—"Goodness, no, Mrs. Farmer. I see you use Fels-Naptha Soap; your hands are white and you have plenty of time for reading and music. You can't get ahead of the woman who uses Fels-Naptha Soap, whether she lives in the country or city."

Do women cling to delusions longer than men? In China, men do the washing, and they have been doing it in the same old way for 4000 years.

In America more than a million women have broken away from the old-fashioned methods and have adopted the Fels-Naptha way of washing. That means cool or lukewarm water—never hot—no boiling, no hard rubbing, a saving of time, temper, trouble, fuel, clothes and health.

FATHER AND SON.

Father and son do not have enough of each other's society. So patent is the fact that Mayor Baker of Cleveland has issued a proclamation asking for an increased intimacy and closeness with these words:

"If we can begin the new year with the resolve that our sons shall be more our companions and our fathers more our comrades it will add both to the sweetness of our private life and to the value of our citizenship."

Mayor Baker is the first of 500 mayors of American cities to join officially in the "Father and Son" movement started in Cleveland, and which has now gone east as far as Bangor, Me., and west as far as Denver.

The average father and son are pretty good comrades up to the time that the boy becomes of high school age. They play together and work together. One sees them taking long walks on Sunday and going fishing on holidays. The boy can have a better time with his "dad" than with any of his playmates, and as for "dad," he would rather lose a finger than disappoint the "kid." So they continue cronies and pals up to the very time that the boy needs father most, and the father needs the boy; they separate. In the next five years the Y. M. C. A. secretary of the athletic coach can tell the father more about his son than he knows himself.

When the boy goes away to school and forms new associations the distance between the two increases. A surprising number of the letters from father to sons in college takes the form of hastily scribbled checks. At the end of school days father and son feel an ill defined uneasiness in each other's presence. They have nothing in common. The father fears that the son may think him old fashioned, and the son fancies, expecting every moment some solemnly delivered "good advice."

It is unfortunate that it is so, but the fact may as well be faced. There are exceptions and these constitute a peculiarly happy contrast.

What is finer, indeed, than the sight of a youth admitted into the circle of his father's friends? The boy that is a companion of "dad" all the way may not know more from the boy that has drifted from his father, but he has less to unlearn.

Look on the bright side. It is the right side. The hour may be cheerless and somber with clouds, but it will be no better to wear a gloomy and sad countenance. It is the sunshine and not the clouds that makes the flowers. The sky is blue twice where it is black once. You have troubles—no have others. None are free from them. That would be a dull sea and the sailors would never get skill were there nothing to disturb its surface. There is more virtue in a sunbeam than in a whole hemisphere of clouds and gloom.

Let us make it our duty and pleasure from this time forth to spread such an influence around us that whoever we may come in contact with will be better and happier by having known us, so that our golden rule will be: "Never drop a speech that could carry sorrow to any heart, wherever our words might reach." It has been beautifully said that "woman is the crown of creation." God grant that each of us shall add a precious jewel to this glorious crown that shall shine through endless ages.

Time has demonstrated that there is no joy, no comfort, no sweetness, no pleasure in the world like that of a good wife. She is the same in health and in sickness, the husband's eye, his hand, his bosom friend, his partner at all times, his other self, not to be separated by any calamity, but ready to share all sorrow and discontent, to live and die with him; nay more, to die for him.

Parents should never consider their obligations to their children discharged when they have fed and clothed and housed and otherwise cared for the little bodies. They should provide food for their minds, and ever keep the little lives clothed in the beautiful white robes of purity, and sheltered by the strong, true love of the parents' heart.

Teach your children to pursue some honorable employment and a thousand temptations depart; give them pure and wholesome recreations and pernicious ones lose their flavor; infuse into their hearts a love of home, of family and friends, and they will no longer love the illusions which separate them from them.

We can gain more glorious victory over another when an injury is begun on their part, that kindness should begin on our part.

It is said that the two best things the Creator allowed to escape from heaven to gladden and beautify earth were women and flowers.

RAINELLE, W. VA.

I landed here April 27 and found employment with the Meadow River Lumber Co., which has one of the largest plants in the state, and own vast boundaries of timber. The climate seems to be healthy, the nights are cool and the days are warm. We have had a continued drouth ever since my arrival here. This plant is about 14 miles from the main C. & O. line that runs through Charleston. This part of the country is not so rough as the main Eastern part of the state, having been through a great part of West Virginia I think this part can be relied on to a great extent in the agricultural line. The most important crops are potatoes, hay and garden products. I am a native of Magoffin county and as my home county hasn't any paper printed in it, I decided to write my nearest paper, so I selected the Big Sandy News.

WARREN BALLEEY.

FISHING WITH A "NIGHT LINE."

In the June Woman's Home Companion a contributor says that fishing with a "night line" is good sport for young campers and about as fascinating fun as any boy can have. With professional fishermen it is an old story, but very few boys understand how simple it is or how for an outlay of from twenty-five to seventy-five cents you can run a good chance of catching a "whopper." The author of the article tells exactly how to make a night line and gives many suggestions. In part he writes as follows:

"I once saw a fisherman at Wolfe Island, near Kingston, Canada, take from his night line a sturgeon weighing exactly one hundred and seventy pounds. Of course the locality where you set your line will necessarily affect your catch. Don't expect the night line to work in a spot where no fish have been caught before."

"Never try to 'set' a night line with dead bait. Spend an hour or so catching a few young perch or other fish, and run the hook into the back just to one side of the back fin. That of course is not to be done until you have taken your outfit well into the lake or river and dropped anchor in about twenty feet of water. When the anchor touches bottom so that the buoy will float easily and with some 'give' to the rope, proceed to bait the lines and lower them one by one.

"A four- or five-inch perch will keep swimming about in lively fashion on a night line, attracting any big fellows that may pass. Of course nothing is 'dead sure' about night-line fishing, for the big fish are rare and are suspicious about traps. But when once a twenty- or a hundred-pound fellow is found tugging the buoy half under water next morning, the trouble of constructing the night line has paid for itself a dozen times over."

"Of course you should see to it carefully that the raft is placed out of the way of passing steamboats or small craft. In case a big fellow is discovered on the line when the morning search is made, no wise young fisherman need be told that the only way to land him is simply to pull up the anchor into the stern of the boat and tow the raft and its living prey to shore."

MAINTENANCE OF DIRT ROADS.

In a contest in which nearly five thousand children all over the United States engaged, two girls and a boy, all aged 14, have been awarded prizes by Logan Waller Page, Director of the U. S. Office of Public Roads, for writing the best essays on the repair and maintenance of dirt roads.

So admirable was the essay submitted by Amy Coon, of Scammon, Kansas, and so well did she lay down the fundamental rules to be observed even by road engineers that the American Highway Association, in addition to the medal awarded by Mr. Page, has decided to send her to the American Road Congress to be held in Atlanta early in November, paying all expenses.

Miss Coon will undoubtedly be the heroine of the American Highway Association will not only pay all the expenses of the young lady but will see that she is well cared for by the wives of the local officials of the Congress. Her essay will be read to the engineers and the other delegates who will attend the Congress.

Miss Amy says that the chief reason why earth roads have received no attention and little improvement in the last 40 years is because they have not had sufficient place in the public mind.

"People seldom give the improvement of roads any thought beyond paying their taxes or working them and sometimes getting out of it all together. They then find fault with the road overseer."

"Straight roads are desirable, but in hilly countries it is often necessary to make a winding road in order to have a level grade."

"After the road is properly located the next thing to be thought of is the drainage. A poorly drained road is very undesirable when after a rain or snow, the horses feet and wagon wheels cut it up then it becomes impassable with mud, and then a freeze comes which leaves the road in a worse state than before."

"When the water is allowed to course down the middle of the road it washes out gutters and ruts that are quickly enlarged by the wagon wheels. This can easily be overcome by proper drainage."

U. S. WARNS AGAINST ALLEGED CHOLERA CURES.

Government Has Not Approved Any Treatment Except the Protective Serum.

Washington, D. C.—Evidence of what appears to be a well organized campaign to delude farmers throughout the country into buying an alleged cure for hog cholera, under the impression that this has been investigated and approved by the United States Government, has reached the Department of Agriculture. Articles praising this medicine, Benetol by name, are being sent out widespread to newspapers. These articles are so worded that it appears as if the Department of Agriculture had received reports from the state of Minnesota showing that the medicine had proved most beneficial. As a matter of fact the one report received by the Department was an unofficial and unsolicited statement sent presumably from the promoters themselves. The Department attaches no importance whatsoever to this statement. It has no reason to believe in the efficiency of any proprietary cure for hog cholera and does not recommend any. Under certain conditions it urges farmers to protect their stock with anti-hog-cholera serum but that is all.

In connection with this attempt it may be said that the medicine, which is now put forward as good for hogs, was advertised some time ago as a means of killing tuberculosis, typhoid, and cancer germs, according to an article published in the Journal of the American Medical Association. At that time it was asserted that the Army was no more interested than the Department of Agriculture is now.

In view of the evidence that the attempt to create this false impression is persistent and widespread, all hog owners are warned to communicate with the United States authorities before accepting as true any statement that the Government recommends any treatment other than the serum already mentioned.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memory of Maggie L. May, who died at her home two miles above Prestonsburg, May 27, 1914, of heart failure.

Only a short time ago she was with us, bright and happy, carrying joy and gladness wherever she went; but, alas, "the Reaper" who reaps the bearded grain at a breath, and the flowers that grow between" hath very suddenly cut her down and the place that knew her once shall know her no more. How deep the shadows that shall rest upon her homestead and her family to which she was a loving, faithful wife and kind mother, and how deep the chill resting upon the warm and affectionate hearts of her loved ones.

She was always a loving, obedient daughter, an affectionate sister. Pleasant memories of her genial disposition shall live ever in the hearts of all who knew her and cause the deepest sorrow for her loss, but they "sorrow not as those without hope." Her unobtrusive, uniform piety gave evidence that her Christian profession was sincere and affords the blessed consolation and belief that Christ saw some good thing in her, and reaching forth, took her in his sheltering arms and gathered her to himself. She sleeps her last sleep in that beautiful cemetery and the evening winds as they sigh through the trees which surround these God's acres, chant the sweet requiem for the dead that have "gone in the joyousness of the morning" from this world of sorrow and strife, gone soaring up to Heaven to be with her Heavenly Father until the day of Resurrection, when she will come forth in all glory to meet all her loved ones.
